Angus Australia is a member based organisation focused on supporting the genetic improvement of Angus and Angus-influenced cattle and beef. Angus Australia has over 3,900 members, with the majority actively involved in the breeding of pedigree Angus cattle. These Angus breeders are responsible for over 40% of animals registered in Australian pedigree beef herds.

Angus Australia's strategic objective is to undertake activities which advance the interests of the Australian Angus-based cattle industry by:

- (a) Maintaining the Breeding Registers and any other pedigree and performance records needed for the genetic advancement of Angus-based cattle;
- (b) Increasing members' ability to develop and produce world-leading Angus-based cattle and related genetics;
- (c) Increasing members' ability to market world-leading Australian Angus-based cattle and related genetics;
- (d) Increasing members' ability to produce and market world-leading Australian Angus based beef and related animal by-products;
- (e) Establishing relationships with other organisations whose purpose is to improve and promote the beef cattle industry.

It's no secret that Angus is the breed of choice in much of Australia and Angus Australia works in conjunction with members to keep the Angus breed at the leading edge.

The Angus Australia head office is based in Armidale in northern New South Wales with a staff of over 20 full time employees.

Angus Australia is governed by a Board of Directors who are responsible for making key strategy and policy decisions, and is supported by State Committees and Regional Groups who promote the interests of the Angus breed and run various breed promotion activities around Australia.
